Foreword

One of the important traditions of the Plymouth High School is the publication of the Yearbook. Students, teachers and parents alike look forward with interest and enthusiasm to the Plythean as it comes from the press. Since so much of what they planned and worked out together is retold in the recorded scenes, the Yearbook serves to make the experiences permanent in their hearts and minds.

It is fitting, therefore, for the staff to build this year's publication around music, the universal language. Music, like the other fine arts, is an effective medium of communication. It interprets the deepest human feelings and can be easily understood by many. It is a unifying influence in our school and it contributes to a fuller life. Fortunate are those who appreciate music.
